BUCKLIN'S ROARING SPREE.

the New York Club. A number of fashionable clubmen went to the Jefferson Market Police Court this morn-

They wanted to see what disposition would be made of the charge against William C. Bucklin, Chief Inspector of the New York Consolidated Gas Company and President of the Sheldon Manufacturing Company, who was arrested close on midnight last night for creating a disturbance at

His nineteen-year-old daughter, who witnessed his arrest from a window of the house, hurried around to the police station after him with a bondsman to secure his release, but he would not permit his friend to go bail for him.

Policeman Heinze, who arrested him, had "Good morning, Mr. Bucklin," said the reporter.

The prisoner sat up quickly and smiled as he answered pleasantly, "Good morning."
"Can you give The Evening Wonlo a statement of the causes which led to the trouble you had last night?" he was asked.
"I was jiggy. In other words, full. "So full that I have only an indistinct recollection of what happened," he answered.
"It is all is the morning papers."
"Yes, I see it is, I see it is stated that I accused the clubmen of insulting women who passed their house. Well, that is a fact."

"Not recently," he replied first, but when pressed to state who it was or when it was that any one belonging to him had been insulted, or in what manner, he could not sulted, or in what manner, he could not do so.

"It's an unfortunate occurrence," he said.
"I do not know what prompted me to make such a row. Although I am not a member of any club, I am well known to some members of every club of any note in this city."
"How about knocking over that ash barrel last night?" he was asked.
"I was shoved off the stoop of the club-house, and knocked it over accidentally."
Then he grew timorous, and when the reporter informed him that Dr. Nelson C. Chapman, the member of the club who caused his arrest, and James P. Smi h, President of the club, were outside waiting to press the complaint of disorderly conduct against him, he became very much agitated.
He sent a message first to Mr. Smith asking that gentleman to come in and see him.
"Let him come and see me," was that gentleman's reply.

Then Mr. Bucklin sent a message to Dr.

Chapman requesting an interview, but the doctor paid no attention to the message.

Dr. Chapman lives at the Brunswick Hotel, Dr. Chapman lives at the Brunswick Hotel, and made a complaint against the prisoner, stating that he had "attempted to force an entrance to the New York Club, using vile and abusive language to the members of the club, and causing a large crowd to collect." The magistrate arrived a few minutes later. Mr. Bucklin was brought into the court-room and placed on the line with the drunks, petty thieves and unfortunate women, who were waiting their turn to go before the court. He appeared to feel his position keenly. He had not a friend in court. His daughter, who was expected, did not appear.

He was about the last prisoner arraigned before His Honor. The complaint was read to him, and in his deep bass voice the little Judge inquired:

"What have you got to say?"

"Well, it has been my experience," deslared the Justice, addressing Mr. Smith, that a gentleman is a gentleman under any circumstances. He may take too much wine, but if he is a gentleman he will still act like one, and never as you did," he ended, turning to the prisoner.

"It is for the gentlemen here to say if they will accept your apology or not," replied the magistrate.

Mr. Chapman said that personally an apology would be satisfactory to him. It was not be, Mr. Chapman, who felt aggrieved; it was the Club as a body that Mr. Bucklin had insulted.

"Why, Your Honor," said Mr. Chapman, growing indignant as he thought about it, the language he used was positively vile.

It was worse than obscene. I can say no

After some more parleying of this kind President Smith, of the Club, said: "Well, I am merciful, as I hope for mercy, and if Mr. Bucklin apologizes for insulting the Club I will accept it on behalf of the members."

Mr. Bucklin eagerly accepted the proposition and made a public retraction of everything he had said derocatory to the character of the Club or its members.

"Then I'll fine you $10 and remit the fine by request of Mr. Smith," said the Judge.

The clubmen hurried out of the court-room and Mr. Bucklin followed them a few minutes later.

New York's Contributions, a Magnificent

Total Already, Are Still Climbing. THE WORLD fund for the Jacksonville fever sufferers is climbing toward the $5,000 mark, and the total amount sent from New York in this good cause is now over $62,000.

Among the latest benefit performances announced is that of the Rival Dramatic and Musical Association, to be given at the Windsor Theatre Oct. 7. The $5,800 Money Package Recovered. The $5,800 in cash which disappeared so suddenly and mysteriously at the National Bank of the R and mysteriously at the Namonal Bank of the Republic or Fritia, morning last has been recovered.

So much information was accorded an Evraning
World reporter at Finkerton's detective agency this moraing. How, when or where the money was found could not be learned, although it is certain that no arrest has been made.
The bank officials, when called upon for information, would not even acknowledge the recovery of the missing package of notes.

It is a peculiarity of fairs, however, that they who are supposed to have the greatest interest in this sort of exhibition find more to please in the elaborate programme of sporting events which has been prepared by the astute management.

The trotting events are especially promising, 150 entries of some of the fastest flyers in the country having been made.

The track, which has been newly laid out, is but a half mile in length, but it is in splendid condition and fast time is promised.

TO AID JACKSONVILLE JOURNALISTS. A Benefit Performance of "Fascination" to be Given by Miss Corn Tanner. A special benefit performance of " Fascination," that sparkling, jolly comedy which has been charming theatre-goers, will be given on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Fourteenth Street Theatre by Miss Cora Tanner and her company, in aid of the newspaper men and their families who are suffer. ing from yellow fever in Jacksonville. Col. W. E. Sinn and Manager J. W. Rosenquest, have gratuitously offered the use of the theatre with its working force and all its properties, and from the way the seats are being sold, the indications are that the benetheatre with its working force and all its properties, and from the way the seats are being sold, the indications are that the benefit will be a tremendous success.

Few there are here in the North who can realize what the faithful news-gatherers in the sorrow-laden city of Jucksonville have suffered during the past few weeks in their endeavors to aid the sick in the hospitals and houses of the city. They hunted out, with untiring energy, cases that the health officers could not find, and many lives were saved by the prompt aid the sufferers received at the hands of the newspaper men. No place was too far away, no case was too matignant—wherever there was suffering or death, there, too, was the newspaper man, and there, too, came relief to the sick and dying and burial to the dead. They worked night and day unceasingly, and all about and around them they saw friends and relatives drop away and vanish at the touch of the dread fever; they saw business men and bankers and merchants, ministers, and even doctors, rush with frantic haste from the city through which deah was stalking; but the newspaper men worked and helped and fought until they, too, were dragged from their deaks to the hospitals and the lonely grave, unmourned, save by their comrades. Many are in their graves. The latter, cannot be helped—the former can. They need assistance—nurses and physicians. Their families are dependent on their pens for the necessaries of life. Those who are suck may recover, but now they cannot work and their wives and children must be cared for. So must the widows and orphans of those brave men whose pens are stilled forever—those who have fallen in the struggle.

The entire proceeds of Thursday afternoon's performance will be sent to Jacksonville to relieve the wants of these families, and the amount should be large. Tickets may be obtained at the box office of the theatre, or from the members of the Press Club at No 120 Nassau street.

Every performance of "Fascination" so far has been successful—Thursday's matinée shoul
